A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW

TAKEN OF VIRGINIA'S GREAT SEAPORT FROM NEWPORT NEWS PLATEAU.

Forest of Masts and Acres of Truckage-Why Prices Will Advance with a Bound.

Newpour News, April 20 .- Aside from any argument or the presentation of any statistics, I believe any one who will take his stand on the beautiful plateau stretching between Newport News and Hampton, will by a bird's-eye view of this place be convinced that this is to be one of the great-

Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch, Johnson Respondence of the Richmond Dispatch Annal Respondence of the Richmond Dis

Then come down from the plateau, walk the streets, and what is the observation? A busier place cannot be found in the country. I do not mean a more feverish place, but a busier place in the sense of solid, steady-going attention to business. There are no plodders here. Even the young people one meets enter into everthing with a thorough going are. Their social organizations, their caurch gatherings are all characterized by the suggestion that whatever is worth doing is worth doing in essnest.

IMPROVEMENT EVERYWHERE. Improvement is the rule everywhere. Now that the weather is settling, painting up and beautifying the old noises is the order of the day. One hears of some new building to be erected at every turn, and the indux of capital for investment in eligible lots is steadily on the increase. Even since my last letter heavy negotiations have been set on foot which cannot fail to give a rapid push upwards of reality.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company are largely increasing their trackage capacity here, and have under construction two new piers and a passenger station, thus fulfilling their promise to spenit upwards of $1,000,600 of their new loan in Newport News improvements; while it is learned on the best authority that we have only seen the beginning of what the shipward company intend to do. Every other interest of the city might be climinated from the situation, and judging the future by the past, in three years this corporation alone would demand more residences than are now in the place.

ONLY ONE FACTOR.

In a recent letter I aliuded to the fact that soo houses, to be built by northern capital, were under contract. This, however, is only one factor in the argument of Newport News's development. It is, indeed, the least of the factors. There are as many more houses to be put up not by capitalists, but by men of small means who have made enough on their first investment to go into building and take advantage of the demand for homes. This marks a distribution of presperity that in a sense is worth more than the investment of large capitalists. Newport News is one of the few places where the man of small means stands on a footing with the man of large means, as he does not have to take the risk of a decline. Prices of eligible lots such as those in the plateau I lave appoken of in the beginning of this lever cannot go backwards, and the man who holds one or two of them cannot be squeezed out by the man who owns lifty. In short, his lots cannot be beared, and if capital attempts to built its own holdings he gets the benefit of any such movement. It is the soud, steady, intrinsic value of real state here that has reulered the small ONLY ONE PACTOR. capital attention of any such movement, it is the solid, steady, intrinsic value of real estate here that has reinfered the small holder independent. There are scores of men in Newport News to-day, or investors at Newport News, hving elsewhere, whose property has trebled in value since they bought it, but who would not sell for four times the original price. They simply know that under the law of demand and supply their property and all the property contiguous to them must continue to advance steadily. Holders in the plateau between Newport News, and Hampton, particularly, see that every encroachment upon them is so nouch per cent, on their investment, and this encroachment will soon reach a point when the advance in prices will be with bounds instead of strides.
